PROJECTS

Flex Keyboard

This is a tool that makes the use of computer for handicapped people more easy and comfortable. Any handicapped people who could not type with their paralyzed hand they simply wear a hand gloves (integrated with flex sensors) and they can type in this application by flexing their fingers only. This application can read the fingers flexing movement of the user and make type of characters in the application window.

- Technology/Tools: Java, Using Thread technique to detect movement of each fingers.
- Awards: This project gained 1st position on University Department project show casing day on Microcontroller, Microprocessor and Interfacing category. This project also got place github code vault program 2020.

DevTrack

At present, I am working with a group of professionals and new bee programmers where we are trying to make a tool like Top Tracker. This tool can track all the activity of a user and can make a report to trainer. This tool is building to track all the activity of the students. In this pandemic situation, this type of tool is too much needy as many institutes operate their educational activity online. We are making this tool for an online training institute “DevSkill”.

- Technology/Tools: ASP.NET core 3.1, Worker Service, Entity Framework, SQLite

EDUCATION

Bachelor in Computer Science & Engineering

United International University

June 2015 – August 2020

- Participated in various workshop arranged by Computer Club
- Worked on different type of projects with teammates and individual on different courses.
- Took participation on all departmental project show day.
- Worked on a project that was gain 1st place on a project show day.
- Worked to implement final year project and found many good deeds on that required area.
- Our findings make a good impact on that research area and the thesis paper was accepted by IEEE Xplore.

BACHELOR THESIS

Title: “A Spell-checker Integrated Machine Learning Based Solution for Speech to Text Conversion”

That proposed project has good findings on training data set. We succeed to find some major issues to train a model for Bangla language, which was not found previously also improve 48% accuracy to convert a text from speech after integrating spell-checker methodology.
